SPIES CONDEMNED TO DEATH

Julius Rosenberg

APPEALS TO ACT AS STAYS:

Judge Denounces Theft of Bomb Secrets for Russia as
"Worse Than Murder"

Judge Kaufman, Page 16.

By WILLIAM R. CONKLIN

In a history-making action, Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman imposed death sentences yesterday on two spies convicted of stealing the atomic bomb secret for Soviet Russia and sentenced a third spy to thirty years in a Federal penitentiary.

Julius Rosenberg, 32 years old, an electrical engineer, and his wife, Ethel, 35, received the death penalty. They are parents of two sons, Michael, 8, and Robert, 4. Morton Sobell, 34, an electronics expert, escaped the death penalty only because his complicity was not proved equal to that of the Rosenbergs. He and his wife, Helen, are parents of a girl, Sydney, 11 years old, and a son, Mark, 18 months old.

The jury that on March 29 convicted all three of conspiracy to commit wartime espionage made no recommendation for mercy. Judge Kaufman showed none. He described the defendants' crime as "worse than murder" and "a sordid, dirty business" not to be compared with Nathan Hale's sacrifice of his life for his country.
Judge Cites Responsibility

United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol pointed out that death was the maximum penalty for wartime espionage for a foreign nation, but did not ask the death penalty. Judge Kaufman said the burden of fixing punishment rested on him alone, and that his responsibility to the nation demanded that he inflict the death penalty. He presided throughout the trial, which began in District Court on March 6.

Defense counsel said they would appeal immediately to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. The appeals will act as an automatic stay of execution of the three sentences. Judge Kaufman had directed that the Rosenbergs be put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison in the week beginning on Monday, May 21.

Should the Circuit Court decide adversely, defense counsel said an appeal would be taken to the United States Supreme Court. Emanuel H. Bloch and his father, Alexander Bloch, defended the Rosenbergs. Sobell was defended by Edward Kunitz and Harold M. Phillips. Headed by Mr. Saypol, the Government staff included Myles J. Lane, Roy M. Cohn and James Kilshheimer, assistant United States attorneys.

Political Hysteria Charged

"I repeat that these defendants assert their innocence and will continue to assert it as long as they breathe," Emanuel Bloch said for the Rosenbergs. "They believe that they are victims of political hysteria, and that their sentence was based upon extraneous political considerations having no legitimate or legal connection with the crime charged against them."

Mr. Phillips said the thirty-year sentence was out of all proportion to the case against Sobell, and insisted that the Government had not proved conspiracy. The attorney said his client, who did not testify at the trial, would appeal to the higher courts.

United States marshals guarding the Rosenbergs in temporary detention cells in the United States Courthouse reported that both were singing there yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Rosenberg, who once studied voice, sang "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly," and the popular song, "Good Night, Irene." The husband sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the marshals said.
Spy Ring Probe Covers 20 Years

Federal authorities are digging back more than 20 years in an attempt to find more espionage agents who worked for the same spy ring which employed A-bomb spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol disclosed yesterday.

The prosecutor refused to give any specific information about the suspects but said most of them "are not American citizens" and have been "active in the Communist party."

"Activities dating back to the late 1920s and early 1930s are under investigation," he added. He refused to say when the grand jury will begin hearing evidence or when arrests will be made.

Death House Gets Mrs. Rosenberg

By GENE SPAGNOLI

Still protesting that she and her husband were innocent of atom-spying, Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg denounced her brother, David Greenglass, yesterday as she was transferred by automobile from the Women's House of Detention to the Sing Sing death house.

Sentenced last week with her spouse, Julius, to die in the electric chair for passing A-secrets to Russia, Mrs. Rosenberg described her transfer as "unnecessary and vindictive." Her attorney, Emanuel Bloch, said he would contest the transfer in the courts.

Lawyer Cites Appeal.

Bloch said the statute authorizing the U.S. marshal to use state facilities for execution is automatically stayed with an appeal. He pointed out that he had filed an appeal for the Rosenbergs after they were sentenced by Judge Irving Kaufman.

Thomas Farley, as she arrived at Sing Sing yesterday.

"They (the Greenglasses) used this trick to make us scapegoats and to save their miserable skins," Mrs. Rosenberg said.

She said her main concern was "to see my two boys," now under the care of social workers. "Now the authorities are trying to make it impossible for a mother to comfort her children, and for a mother to be comforted by her children."

When informed of his wife's removal to Sing Sing, Rosenberg—who is in the Federal House of Detention—said that if Bloch's move to void the transfer fails, "I want to be moved to Sing Sing to be with her."
Mrs. Rosenberg, Condemned Atom Spy, Taken to Sing Sing; Husband Is Kept Here

Mrs. Julius Rosenberg, condemned to death for her part in giving secret atomic bomb information to Soviet Russia, was lodged last night in the women's section of the death house at Sing Sing prison, sole occupant of that section of the prison save for a matron hired for the occasion. The women's section, consisting of three cells, a corridor, and an exercise yard located within a ten-foot-high wall, had been vacant since the execution in March of Mrs. Martha Beck, "lone lady" murderer. Warden Wilfred Donahue of Sing Sing rehired the four matrons who had attended Mrs. Beck, and they will keep Mrs. Rosenberg company in relays, at a cost to the Federal Government of $40 a day.

Mrs. Rosenberg's execution was scheduled for the week of May 31, but this will be postponed indefinitely by the notice of appeal served on the warden yesterday by her attorney, Emanuel Bloch.

Mrs. Rosenberg's husband, sentenced to die in the chair at the same time, remained in the Federal House of Detention. United States Marshal William A. Carroll explained that segregation facilities existed there, while none existed in the Women's House of Detention, a county institution in which Mrs. Rosenberg was kept until noon yesterday.

In a final statement as she was escorted to a car headed toward the death house, Mrs. Rosenberg called the transfer from one prison to the Sing Sing cell, while her appeal was pending, "unnecessary and vengeful." Mr. Bloch said he would seek to have it remedied in the courts.

Then, in a statement issued through Mr. Bloch, Mrs. Rosenberg attacked her brother, David Greenglass, who appeared as a witness for the prosecution at the recent trial, and who received only a fifteen-year sentence.

At Sing Sing, when Mrs. Rosenberg was filling out the usual questionnaire, and was asked what led her to commit her crime—a routine inquiry—she answered:

"I deny guilt."

She was taken to the prison by Marshal Carroll, arriving at 1:56 P. M. She was ticketed as prisoner 110,310, gave up the $15 she was carrying, and signed a waiver that permits her to receive mail in return for the privilege of inspecting it. On the trip she chatted gaily about the weather and the coming of spring. Marshal Carroll reported.
Mrs. Rosenberg Taken to Death House;
Protests Separation From Children

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, sentenced to death with her husband, Julius, last week on espionage conspiracy charges, was taken yesterday to the death house in Sing Sing Prison.

She and her attorney, Emanuel Bloch, pointed out that the filing of appeals had automatically stayed execution of the death sentences and said a court order would be sought against the removal to Sing Sing.

"This transfer to the death house is a matter of vindictiveness and represents cruel and inhuman punishment," said a statement issued in Mrs. Rosenberg's behalf by Bloch. "My husband and I are innocent and will always maintain our innocence. This prosecution is a political frame-up and we will fight to our last breath to prove this accusation is false."

Mrs. Rosenberg, who appeared wan and drawn, said bitterly:
"My main concern at the present is to see my two boys, Michael, 8, and Robert, 4. Arrangements were under way to permit my children to visit me and the authorities are trying to make it impossible to permit a mother to comfort her children and in turn to permit a mother to be comforted by her children."

The youngsters, whom their 35-year-old mother has not seen since her arrest last August, are in a Bronx children's shelter.

Mrs. Rosenberg's prepared statement referred acidly to her brother, David Greenglass, whose testimony helped convict her and who has been let off with a 15-year sentence. She noted that the Atomic Energy Commission, since the convictions, has listed Greenglass as "one of the top four spies."

"My husband and I, who were built up as top spies during the trial, are now confined to the role of subordinates, or couriers," she said.

Mrs. Rosenberg was transferred from the House of Detention by U. S. Marshal Carroll and two deputies, one a woman. Carroll reported later that the prisoner seemed "in good spirits" during the trip to Sing Sing.
NEW YORK CLOSE-UP

BY TEX McCARTY and JINX FALKENBURG

HOLDING TWO OPIUM PIPES—the little one is for ladies—United States Attorney Irving Gayson, the man who prosecuted the recent opium-smuggling case in which the accused was charged with murder, showed a picture of an opium pipe called the "Y" pipe to the jury. "You know the origin of the phrase, 'taking the wrong pipe.'"

The factors to consider in recommending sentence are those which are inherent in the nature of the crime. Gayson said. "The effect of the crime on society is enormous in the case of the importation of opium."

William H. Sturgis, the contractor who was convicted of importing opium under the guise of a "war on the Germans," was sentenced to 10 years in prison. His sentence was upheld by the court of appeals.

Gayson further stated that the importation of opium is a form of tax evasion, where a man's personal reputation is important in the business world. Gayson added, "It is just as crushing to be charged with a crime on the federal level as it is to be convicted of a crime on the state level."

The Gayson case has received nationwide attention. Gayson's sentence of 10 years in prison was met with widespread public outcry. The Gayson case has been described as a "black mark on the nation's reputation."
When we started after this, a two-to-five-year sentence is about the heaviest handed down. We recommended, and we got fifteen, twenty and even twenty-five-year sentences. Today, the counterfeitters know we mean business in this district.

It's fascinating to hear Baypot explain the machinery of sentencing in Federal courts—fascinating, unless you happen to be a target. In a case of espionage or treason, in Federal court the sentence is fixed by the judge; in murder, the penalty is prescribed at death, unless the jury recommends life imprisonment; with kidnaping, it is imprisonment, unless the jury recommends death, when the victim is harmed.

There is even a section in the United States Criminal Code which allows the judge to order the body of the dead defendant to be dissected—a throwback to the ancient English system of drawing and quartering a prisoner prior to impaling each quarter of the pris—
THE SPY STORY: The testimony at the atom bomb spy trial revealed that Julius Rosenberg gave $3,000 to his brother-in-law, David Greenglass, and urged him to use it to escape to Mexico, then to Prague and on to Russia. When Greenglass was on the witness-stand he wasn’t asked what he did with this money. He spent most of it to retain O. John Rogge as his lawyer. Rogge’s fee was $3,000. And, as his counsel, Rogge persuaded him to tell the full story to U. S. Atty. Spawol. Rogge, as counsel to Max Bilitcher—a classmate of defendants Rosenberg and Sobell—also convinced Bilitcher to tell all.

The tragic figure in the case, the mother of Greenglass and the doomed Mrs. Rosenberg, had made a vain plea to Judge Irving Kaufman to spare her daughter’s life. And when she realized that the matter of life or death now was the sole responsibility of her daughter—who can save her life by telling the full story—she asked to see her daughter, to persuade her to reveal all. Mrs. Rosenberg replied that this was inconsistent with her stand of innocence. Besides, was Mrs. Rosenberg’s message, she didn’t want to see her mother, “because she believes my brother, David, and doesn’t believe me.”

PERCENTAGE ON INVESTMENT: Don Hartman, the new executive producer at Paramount, for many years was a successful Hollywood screen writer before he became producer. One of the Paramount directors who congratulated him on his new high office said that Hartman now needs only some business experience—that movie-making is a major industry, involving millions of dollars, and that attention first must be paid to the stockholders and dividends. “You’ve been a writer, Don,” he said. “What we businessmen want is quality, of course, but also movies which will return a profit.”

“Spend $2 million on a picture, but get back $4 million for it,” said Hartman. “Is that right?” “Right,” he was told. “I know that, but don’t discount the writer’s sense of profit,” said Hartman. “100% profit on a $2 million investment is remarkable. But now take the writer: He buys four pencils and some paper—total cost, maybe $5—and from this comes something which often brings him a return of over a million per cent.”

THE LINGUIST & THE LADY: Olivia de Havilland was visited by the Chinese Consul who brought General Chong. The General, he explained, was a language expert who spoke at least ten languages—but, unfortunately, no English. The Consul then learned that Miss de Havilland was born in Japan, and said that Gen. Chong once had been a language officer in Japan. He urged her to say something in Japanese to the General. The actress protested that she had learned only a few words, and they weren’t conversational... “But I told the General you’d speak to him in Japanese,” said the Consul. “Please, He’s waiting...” And so the startled General heard the Academy Award winner say to him, in Japanese: “One, Two, Three, Four, Five, Six.”
CHAT England will send a high commission to study plans for eliminating capital punishment... On April 15 a delegation of Japanese judges will arrive in N. Y. to study court processes and see if they can be introduced in Japan... Carter's Little Liver Pills probably will be Drew Pearson's next sponsor... When Instructor Perl of Columbia Univ. is tried for perjury, the chief government witness will be Max Ehrlich... Irving Fisher, who portrays Harry S. Truman in "Call Me Madam," appeared at the Lambs' Gambol show and was booed. "Imitation," he sighed, "is not flattery. This booing is too real."

THE NEW DIRECTOR: Hans Conrad was assigned to direct his first Hollywood movie, and proceeded with care and deliberation. The star of the movie was an actress with many years of experience in movie-making. She met the young director on the first day, went through the rehearsal of the first scene, and then asked him: "What would you like me to do?"... "What can I tell you?" sighed Conrad. "I guess all I can say is 'be better.'"

THE MAHATMA: Louis Fisher, who has written several books about Gandhi, once was asked by a friend of his to get an autographed photo of Gandhi for him. When Fisher visited Gandhi, he asked for this photo and the Mahatma said he would do it—for $20, which would be donated to a fund to help the Untouchables... "$20? I'll give you $10," said Fisher, and Gandhi agreed... Some months later Fisher met Gandhi's son and told him of his father's 50% cut to $10 for the autographed photo... "Confidentially," the son assured the writer, "he would have done it for $5."

BERGMAN: "I visited Ingrid yesterday," writes Sylvia Lyons, from Rome. "She has a splint on the middle finger of her right hand. She had decided that the furniture needed cleaning, and scrubbed it so hard that she suddenly heard a loud crackling noise and thought she'd broken something in the chair. Two days later her doctor found she'd torn some ligaments in the finger... She looks thin, and explained that for her the best diet was to eat everything she likes. She does not expect to come back to the U. S. A. for a while. Rossellini is preparing her next movie, to be called 'Europe, 1951.'"

"They had designed winter clothes for her, expecting to shoot the movie in January. Now that delays have occurred the clothes will have to be re-designed for Spring. She speaks Italian fluently now, and said she'd learned by listening to it being spoken and asking questions about the meaning of the words she heard. She remained mute, in Italian, for a long time, and one day she found she could speak it—at first, she said, to herself. It was as if suddenly a door had opened for her. And her first Italian thoughts were: 'I speak four languages already, and now I've chosen to live in a country where I must learn a fifth.'"
A-Spy Lonely
In Death Row

Convicted atom bomb spy Ethel Rosenberg finds life lonesome in Sing Sing's death row.

During her first week of confinements, prison officials said today, she has been asking for books, magazines and newspapers to while away the time until the appeal from her conviction is heard by the U. S. Supreme Court.

Mrs. Rosenberg, mother of two children, and her husband, Julius, were sentenced to death in Federal Court here upon their conviction for giving A-Bomb secrets to Russia.
A-Spy Bored
In Death Cell

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, 35, convicted A-bomb spy for Russia, finds life in the Sing Sing death house boring and has turned to books, magazines and newspapers for diversion, prison officials reported yesterday.

Mrs. Rosenberg, who has now spent a week in Sing Sing, was sentenced to die, with her husband, Julius, after a trial in which her brother, ex-Sgt. David Greenglass, was the Government's chief witness against the couple.

Rosenberg is still in the Federal House of Detention in Manhattan. Their attorneys have commenced appeal proceedings.
Mrs. Rosenberg Asks Return Here

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, sentenced to die with her husband, Julius, for passing A-bomb secrets to Russia, yesterday applied to Federal Judge Irving K. Kaufman for an order directing the Government to show cause why she should not be taken from the Sing Sing death house and returned to the Women's House of Detention at 10 Greenwich St. Judge Kaufman indicated he will rule on the application Monday.

Mrs. Rosenberg Wants Court to Transfer Her Again

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, convicted atom spy sentenced to death, charged yesterday that the Government was trying to break her morale and coerce her into confessing by keeping her in Sing Sing's death house "only a stone's throw from the execution chamber." She still maintained her innocence.

In an application to Gov.-Gen. Judge Irving R. Kaufman, Mrs. Rosenberg asked to be retransferred from the death house to the Women's House of Detention, 10 Greenwich Street, pending her appeal. Judge Kaufman said he would rule on the application on Monday.

Mrs. Rosenberg Charges U.S. Seeks To Break Her and Get Confession

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, sentenced to death for atom spying, waited today for a ruling on her plea to be transferred from the "living hell" of Sing Sing's death house.

Mrs. Rosenberg asked the government to show cause why she should not be transferred to the Women's House of Detention at 10 Greenwich St., pending appeal.

Mrs. Rosenberg's affidavit said her transfer "in order to break me is a misuse and abuse of the government's discretion and power which violates my right to due process of law under the Fifth Amendment."

Death House a Living Hell.

"It is a living hell to be separated from the warmth, love, affection and strength of my husband," the application said. "I want him to contemplate my incarceration in this terrible place. It is agony to sit in a cell located not even a stone's throw from the execution chamber."

Mrs. Rosenberg's husband, Julius, also was found guilty of conspiracy to transmit atomic secrets to Russia and sentenced to death.

He is still in the Federal House of Detention, 427 West St.

A-Spy Trial Data

By Howard Bushmore

A transcript of the proceedings of the recent atom bomb spy trial is in the office of the Daily Worker, 35 E. 12th St., and is being closely studied by leading Communist officials, it was learned today.

This costly official record was obtained by Julius and Ethel Rosenberg—who have been sentenced to death—after the defendants swore a pauper's oath that they lacked funds to purchase the transcript.

The record was then supplied by the Government.

Since Federal Judge Irving B. Kaufman condemned the pair of spies to Sing Sing's electric chair, the Daily Worker has conducted an all-out campaign against the jurist and his sentence.

This interest of the Red Fascists' official organ in an espionage case is unusual since the Daily Worker did not even cover the trial itself and the verdict was reported in a two-paragraph story.

After violent attacks on Kaufman for imposing death sentences—attacks reminiscent of blasts against Federal Judge Medina a year ago—the Daily Worker now is appealing for Mrs. Rosenberg's release from Sing Sing's death row.

The Communists claim the government placed her in Sing Sing in an effort to 'break' her, and the woman any's plea for more comfortable quarters near her sailor husband is supported by the Daily Worker.
Lawyer Asks Mental Test for Woman Spy

A court-ordered psychiatric examination was asked yesterday for Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, atom spy sentenced to death, to determine the mental effect of her detention in the Sing Sing death house.

The request was made by Emanuel Bloch, Mrs. Rosenberg's attorney, during a hearing on her plea that she was being subjected to "undue and unusual psychological pressure" in the death house.

Bloch asked Federal Judge John C. Knox to order Dr. Frederic Wutham, psychiatrist, to interview Mrs. Rosenberg. He further requested an adjournment of the hearing until Wutham could complete his findings.

Knox told Bloch to bring the matter up today and continued yesterday's session, which was given over for the most part to testimony backing the Government's contention that Mrs. Rosenberg was transferred to Sing Sing because the Women's House of Detention at 16 Greenwich Ave. lacks facilities for segregated prisoners.

Bloch charged in an affidavit earlier that Mrs. Rosenberg's removal to the death house was motivated by the Government's desire to "break" her and force her to talk. The hearing will continue at 3 P.M. today.
Atom Spy's Plea
For Writ Is Heard

Mrs. Rosenberg Seeking to Leave Death House

Judge John C. Knox opened a hearing yesterday in United States District Court on an application by Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, convicted atom spy, for a writ of habeas corpus to gain her transfer from the death house of Sing Sing Prison to the Women's House of Detention, at 20 Greenwich Avenue.

Emanuel Block, attorney for Mrs. Rosenberg, charged in an affidavit that she was taken to the death house to await execution out of the government's desire to subject her "to cruel and inhuman treatment" in order to force her to give information.

United States Marshal William A. Carroll testified that he moved Mrs. Rosenberg without written authorization after New York authorities told him there were no facilities for segregating prisoners at the Women's House of Detention. Prisoners under death sentence must be segregated. Mrs. Rosenberg's husband, Julius, also condemned to death, is held in the Federal House of Detention under complete Federal control, and no request has been received for his transfer to Sing Sing, Commissioner Carroll said.

An order staying execution of the couple was filed yesterday with the clerk of the District Court, and it also gave the Rosenbergs and Morton Sobell, convicted with them, and sentenced to thirty years in prison, permission to file a typewritten record instead of a printed record for their appeal. Hearing on the writ was adjourned until 4 p.m. today.

During the hearing yesterday, Hy Gardner, columnist for the New York Herald Tribune, was called to testify about an item in his column of April 2 to the effect that "inside sources will have you believe that the death sentence would be imposed on the atom spies to force them to talk." He said the item was "based on speculation." He described the phrase "inside sources" as a "figure of speech." Under questioning by Mr. Block, he said he did not get any information from any government source connected with the case.
Hearings opened before Judge Knox on Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg's application for a writ to force her removal from Sing Sing death house where she has been confined since shortly after her espionage conspiracy conviction. The first government witnesses claimed a lack of facilities to house her here.
MRS. ROSENBERG OPENS FIGHT ON DEATH HOUSE

A hearing was begun yesterday before Federal Judge John C. Knox to determine whether the Government had transferred Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, convicted as an agent of the spy sentenced to death, to Sing Sing's death house to subject her to "cruel and inhuman" treatment, to make her talk.

Mrs. Rosenberg was removed from the Women's House of Detention, 10 Greenwich Street, on April 11. United States Marshall William A. Carroll testified, after he had been notified by Albert Williams, city Commissioner of Corrections, that the city prison did not have the proper facilities to segregate a condemned prisoner.

Mr. Carroll said the removal was effectuated without written authorization but that he had consulted the director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons in Washington by telephone. The marshal added that before taking Mrs. Rosenberg to Sing Sing he personally inspected the women's death cell block and found the cells to be clean and sanitary.

Another witness called by defense counsel Emmanuel Bloch was Ruth Colline, superintendent of the Women's House of Detention. She said that Federal women prisoners here were kept in the city institution but that the institution did not have facilities to keep prisoners segregated.
Question Whether Newsman Must Divulge Sources in Spy Case to Be Argued in Court

The question whether a newspaper man must divulge the sources of his information will be argued Monday before Federal Judge John C. Knox by the Government, and counsel for Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, convicted atom spy sentenced to death.

The argument on privilege arose yesterday at a hearing in behalf of Mrs. Rosenberg who is seeking to be retransferred from Sing Sing's death house to the Women's House of Detention, 10 Greenwich Street, pending the final outcome of her appeal. Mrs. Rosenberg has charged that the Government moved her to the death house to subject her to "cruel and inhuman" treatment to make her talk.

Mrs. Rosenberg's attorney, Emanuel Bloch, called Leonard Lyons, New York Post columnist, to testify about twenty items he had painted concerning the recent atom spy trial.

Mr. Lyons said he believed the items were authentic but refused to divulge the source of his information. He did admit, however, that the news material was not given to him by anyone in Government service.

Mr. Bloch argued that newspaper men did not enjoy the same privileges in this state as did doctors, lawyers and clergymen. He added that since no Federal law prevailed governing such a newspaper man's privilege, the state law held.

Judge Knox recalled that many years ago a reporter for the former New York Herald was cited for contempt when he refused to tell a Federal grand jury the sources of his information. The case was taken to the Supreme Court and was finally decided in favor of the newspaper man, the lawyer said.

Mr. Lyons said he refused to divulge his sources because he believed "the relationship between news sources and newspaper men is as sacred as between lawyer and client, doctor and patient and a clergyman and a confessor."
Mrs. Rosenberg Asks
Return to Jail Here

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, under death sentence with her husband, Julius, on espionage conspiracy convictions, applied yesterday for an order directing the government to show cause why she should not be removed from the Sing Sing death house and returned to the Women's House of Detention here.

Judge Irving Kaufman took the petition under advisement and indicated he would rule Monday.

Mrs. Rosenberg charged that the Attorney General or his agent caused her to be transferred 'in order to break me... to destroy my spirit and overcome my will to resist efforts... to compel me to admit guilt of a crime of which I have been convicted, although I am innocent.'

She described incarceration in the death house as "agony" and said "I am sealed in the gray walls of this prison as in a tomb."

Woman Spy Obtains Habeas Corpus Writ

Mrs. Rosenberg Challenges Shift to Sing Sing

A writ of habeas corpus was issued yesterday afternoon by Senior Judge John C. Knox of the U.S. District Court to ascertain whether Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, convicted atomic bomb spy, has been subjected to "undue and unusual psychological pressure" while imprisoned at Sing Sing. A hearing is scheduled for May 2.

In a conference of defense and prosecution counsel, an agreement was reached, waiving a personal appearance by Mrs. Rosenberg at the United States Courthouse in Foley Square.

Emanuel Bloch, defense attorney, told Judge Knox that newspapers had reported that transferring Mrs. Rosenberg from the Women's House of Detention here to Sing Sing Prison was "done for the purpose of breaking her." He said he would subpoena a number of newspapermen who had commented on this development.

Irving H. Saypol, U.S. Attorney, denied that Mrs. Rosenberg was subjected to "any coercive attempts" by the government. He disclosed that Julius Rosenberg, her husband, would be transferred to the death house in Sing Sing in a few days. The Rosenbergs are sentenced to be executed in the week beginning May 21.

Red Spies Got Spaceship Data

America's No. 1 Rocket Secret

By GEORGE CARRILL

On the surface, Communist Russia may seem to be trailing far behind the United States in the race for space exploration. But in reality, the Soviet Union has been making rapid progress in this field.

In fact, it is believed that the Russians may have already launched a satellite into orbit around the Earth. This would be a significant achievement, as it would mark the first time that a man-made satellite had orbited the Earth.

It is also believed that the Russians are working on a spacecraft that could travel to the Moon. This would be another major breakthrough in space exploration, as it would allow humans to reach the Moon for the first time.

The United States, on the other hand, has been slow to make progress in space exploration. The country has been spending a lot of money on space programs, but the results have not been as impressive as those of the Russians.

The United States needs to accelerate its space program if it is to stay ahead of the Russians. It is believed that the United States could be behind the Russians in space exploration if it does not act quickly.

The United States needs to invest more money in space exploration and to develop new technologies if it is to stay ahead of the Russians.

Writer Refuses to Tell Spy-Case Items' Source

Leonard Lyons, columnist for "The New York Post," said in a United States District Court yesterday that "the relationship between a news source and a newspaper man is as sacred as between a lawyer and his client, a doctor and his patient and a clergyman and a confessor."

Mr. Lyons gave this as his reason for refusing to disclose the sources of certain items he had written about the case of Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, condemned atom-bomb spy.

His refusal to answer came in the second day of a hearing brought by the woman's lawyer, Benjamin Black, to have Mrs. Rosenberg transferred from the death house at Sing Sing to the Women's House of Detention, 10 Greenwich Avenue. She contends that she is subjected to "cruel and inhuman treatment" to make her talk.

Judge John C. Knox, hearing the Rosenberg motion, set 11 a.m. Monday for further argument on the question posed by Mr. Lyons' refusal.

Columnist Refuses to Tell Where He Got Items About Ethel Rosenberg

The right of a newspaperman to withhold his source of information will be argued before Federal Judge John C. Knox Monday in an offshoot of the recent atom spy trial.

The question came up yesterday at a hearing on Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg's appeal to be transferred from Sing Sing's death house to the Women's House of Detention, 10 Greenwich St. Mrs. Rosenberg and her husband Julius were sentenced to death for atom spying. Both are appealing.

Leonard Lyons, a columnist for the New York Post, was called to the stand by Mrs. Rosenberg's attorney, Emanuel Bloch, to testify about a series of items he had printed during the trial.

Mr. Lyons refused to divulge the source of his information, but said he believed the items were authentic.

His refusal, Mr. Lyons said, was based on his belief that "the relationship between news sources and newspapermen is as sacred as between lawyer and client, doctor and patient, and a clergyman and a confessor."

Mrs. Rosenberg, in asking that she be confined in the House of Detention until her appeal from the death sentence is decided, has charged that the government moved her to the death house to subject her to "cruel and inhuman" treatment to make her talk.
Lyons Refuses To Bare Sources Of A-Spy Items

Argument will be resumed Monday morning in the case of Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, condemned atom bomb spy, on the question whether a newspaper columnist must disclose the source of his information.

Leonard Lyons columnist for The Post yesterday refused to divulge sources of about 20 items he had printed concerning the recent spy trial. He had been called to testify by Emanuel Bloch, attorney for Mrs. Rosenberg who is seeking to be transferred from the Sing Sing death house to the Women's House of Detention 10 Greenwich Ave. She contends she is subjected to "cruel and inhuman treatment" to make her talk.

Lyons admitted the news items were not given him by anyone in government service, but refused to give the source because, he said, "the relationship between news sources and newspapermen is as sacred as between lawyer and client, doctor and patient, and a clergyman and a confessor."

Bloch argued that newspapermen did not enjoy the same privileges in this state as did doctors, lawyers and clergymen. Federal Judge Knox set 11 a.m. Monday for further argument on the question.

On Spy Case ‘Leaks’

Leonard Lyons, of the New York Post, yesterday became the second gossip columnist in two days to become embroiled in court over "exclusives" printed about the case of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Rosenberg, under death sentence on espionage conspiracy charges.

Lyons appeared at the second day of Federal Court hearings on a motion by defense counsel Emanuel Bloch to have Mrs. Rosenberg removed from the Sing Sing death house pending appeal. The columnist refused to answer several questions by Bloch on the sources of 20 items he used about the spy case.

Bloch argued that under the law, the only persons who have the privilege of concealing sources of information are lawyers, doctors and clergymen. Lyons argued that newspapermen also were privileged.

Judge Knox said he would hear further argument on the point Monday. He indicated tentative agreement with Lyons by referring to a case "many years ago" in which he thought he remembered the Supreme Court ruled in favor of a newspaperman.

By Gardner, Herald Tribune columnist, admitted Wednesday that he was employing only "spec..."
"inside sources will have you believe" that the Rosenbergs were to get death sentences to make them talk. Gardner described "inside sources" as "a figure of speech." He said he got no information from any government source.

Because the climate of our times is such that refusal to answer questions under oath is synonymous, in the public mind, with admission of Red activities or defiance of Senatorial crime investigators, I write this now—by way of explanation of my appearance before Federal Judge Knox yesterday. I was there under subpoena from Emanuel Bloch, attorney for Ethel Rosenberg, who was convicted and sentenced to death in the atom-bomb spy case. She is in the death house at Sing Sing. Her husband and co-defendant, who also was convicted and sentenced to death, is in the Federal House of Detention.

In a novel proceeding to have his client removed from the death house, Mr. Bloch subpoenaed me for questioning about the many stories I've printed concerning this case. I was sworn in and took the witness stand. Mr. Bloch read each one of my items aloud, introduced them into the record—and then politely but firmly and persistently asked me to state the source of information in each case. I refused to reveal my source, in each case, and stated my belief that the relationship between news source and newspaperman is as privileged as that between client and lawyer, patient and doctor and confessor and clergyman. Mr. Bloch asked the Court to direct me to answer. Judge Knox will make his decision known on Monday.

Although the role is smaller than the first one offered him, Gabel is asking for a higher fee. The new press agent for the Stock Club is the TV and radio actress, Jacqueline Billeingsley. By Leonard Lyons

The Daily Worker reported: "Leonard Lyons was accused in Federal Court yesterday of committing an 'act of treachery' and spreading 'a vicious falsehood' when he wrote in his New York Post column that Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, condemned to death of alleged A-Bomb espionage, had never, while in jail, sought to see their two children. The accusation was made by Emanuel Bloch, attorney for the condemned couple, during a hearing in Judge John C. Knox's court on a motion to remove the Rosenbergs from the Sing Sing death house pending appeal." ... The Daily Worker, of course, lied.

Neither I, nor the reporters present, heard any mention of "act of treachery." Mr. Bloch assured me that he hadn't said it and that the minutes would prove he hadn't said it. ... He did question me, in court, about my item—one of 20 I'd printed about the atom bomb spy case—that the Rosenbergs hadn't asked to see their children. The lawyer denied this was true and said the social workers prevented the Rosenbergs from seeing their children. The Worker failed to mention that Irving Saypol, the U. S. Attorney, then had arisen and told the Court that the social workers had not interfered.

The Worker dismissed the essence of the day's proceedings—which was my refusal, as a newspaperman, to disclose to the attorney for the convicted spies, or to anybody else, the sources of my information. In the Daily Worker's Paradise, the Soviet Union, I eventually would be shot for such a refusal. But here I can and did elect to refuse to reveal my sources. On Monday Judge Knox will decide whether the Court shall direct me to name my sources, or whether such information is privileged. ... I will not resort to subterfuge and say it came from "anonymous sources." I know the sources. I will not name them.

The prospect of a jail sentence for contempt has stirred some of my friends to make expressions of faith. Albert D. Lasker and Billy Rose have volunteered to put up bail. Paul Gallico has assured me that if I go to jail, he will not turn his back on me. Sherman Billingsley and Leo Lindy have promised to supply the meals, and Olivia de Havilland said she would deliver the food packages. Ethel Merman, Vivian Blaine, Celeste Holm and Gertrude Lawrence would sing midnight serenades from across the street. ... But nothing's going to happen to me, 'cause Bill Boyd just telephoned and promised: 'I'll come in with mule, two guns, blazin', pudder, and get you out. They can't keep a pal of Hopp's in the clink.'
Rosenberg to Join Wife in Death House

Julius Rosenberg, 32, condemned atom spy, will join his wife, Ethel, 25, today or tomorrow in Sing Sing's death house.

Federal authorities ordered the transfer of the traitorous electrical engineer, who has been held in the Federal House of Detention here since he and his wife were sentenced to death April 5 for conspiracy to commit espionage for Russia in World War II.

Mrs. Rosenberg, taken to the death house several weeks ago, is attempting through court proceeding to get out of condemned row pending her appeal. She maintains she was placed in the death house prematurely in an attempt to coerce her into talking.
Spy Ordered to Death House

The transfer of Julius Rosenberg, who is under sentence of death as a spy, to the Sing Sing Prison death house has been ordered, by James V. Bennett, Director of the Bureau of Prisons. It was announced yesterday. United States Marshal William A. Carroll may move him today or tomorrow from the Federal House of Detention, 427 West Street. The prisoner's wife, Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, already has been moved to Sing Sing.
Order Rosenberg To Death House

Julius Rosenberg, 32, convicted atom spy, has been ordered removed to Sing Sing death house, where his wife, Ethel, 35, is a prisoner.

The U. S. Marshal's office yesterday said Rosenberg may be transferred to Ossining from the Federal House of Detention today or tomorrow.

Mrs. Rosenberg has instituted court proceedings to be re-transferred to the Women's House of Detention, on the ground that by being held in the death cell she is subjected to "cruel and inhuman treatment" to make her talk.
Atom Spy
Nearer Chair

Convicted Russian atom spy Julius Rosenberg today moves closer to Sing Sing's electric chair in which he and his wife are sentenced to die the week of May 21.

The 22-year electrical engineer was to be transferred from the Federal House of Detention, 422 West st., to the Sing Sing death house, where his wife, Ethel, 35, already has been sent.

Mrs. Rosenberg is trying to win transfer back to the Women's House of Detention. She claims that being in the death cell subjects her to "cruel and inhuman treatment."

Rosenberg Going
To Death House

Julius Rosenberg, 32, sentenced to death for atomic spying for Russia, will be removed from the Federal House of Detention, Manhattan, to Sing Sing's death house late today or tomorrow.

Meanwhile, his wife, Ethel, 35, already transferred to the death house, has instituted proceedings to be sent back to the Women's House of Detention, Manhattan, pending her appeal. She contends that the Government sent her to the death cell to subject her to "cruel and inhuman treatment." to make her talk.
Rosenberg to Join Wife in Death House

While Federal Judge Knox deliberates on the petition of Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg for her removal from the Sing Sing death house to the Women's House of Detention here pending her appeal, the government decided yesterday to move her husband, Julius, into the death house with her.

James V. Bennett, Director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, sent an order to U. S. Marshal William A. Carroll to move Rosenberg from the Federal House of Detention here. Carroll said he probably would make the transfer today or tomorrow.

The Rosenbergs are under death sentence on their conviction as atom spies for Soviet Russia. They have appealed.
ROSENBERG SHIFTED TO THE DEATH HOUSE

Pierced and blinking in the midday sunshine, Julius Rosenberg, convicted atom spy, was transferred yesterday from the Federal House of Detention on West Street to the death house at Sing Sing. Warden Wilfred Deane said Rosenberg might make supervised visits to his wife, Ethel, already in the death house.

Rosenberg was taken in an automobile by Chief United States Marshal William A. Carroll, Warden E. E. Thompson of the detention house and two deputy marshals. His wrists were handcuffed.

One hundred dock workers and bartenders augmented photographers and reporters waiting in a semi-circle around the detention house's main floor as the condemned man emerged. Except for a day's growth of whiskers, Rosenberg was neat in appearance. He wore a double-breasted gray suit with a white handkerchief in his breast pocket, and a red tie with a palm-tree pattern.

At Sing Sing he was assigned the prison number 110,646. To the routine question, "To what do you attribute your criminal act?" he replied, "Neither I nor my wife is guilty." The execution date has not been fixed pending the outcome of appeals.
A-Spy, Wife In Death Row

Julius Rosenberg, 33, the convicted U-bomb spy, joined his wife, Ethel, 35, in the Sing Sing death house yesterday afternoon, still protesting his innocence. Asked the usual Sing Sing entrance question — to what he attributed his criminal act—Rosenberg said: "Neither I nor my wife is guilty."

The convicted Soviet spy was given No. 110649, and $2.05 cash on him was impounded.

There are now six men, including Rosenberg in the death house and his wife, who arrived April 11. Chief Marshal William A. Carroll, Chief Deputy Thomas Farley, Deputy Pasquale Sabatelli and Warden E. E. Thompson, of the House of Detention, drove the handcuffed Rosenberg to Sing Sing from the Federal House of Detention, 427 West St.
Julius Rosenberg joined his wife, Ethel, as an inmate of the death house at Sing Sing yesterday. The Brooklyn couple are under death sentence for their conviction as atom spies. They have appealed.
Rosenberg Taken to Death House at Sing Sing

Julius Rosenberg, thirty-three, smiling and debonair in a blue-gray double-breasted suit, was driven by United States marshals to the Sing Sing prison death house yesterday afternoon from the Federal House of Detention. His wife, Ethel, also under sentence of death on their conviction of atomic bomb spying, is already in the women's division of the death house, and is appealing her incarceration there. She seeks return to the Women's House of Detention, 10 Greenwich Ave.

Both are under sentence of execution at Sing Sing during the week beginning Monday.

Rosenberg sat in the back seat of the car that met him at the curb outside the main entrance of the House of Detention, 427 West St., between Warden E. E. Thompson, of the House of Detention, and Deputy Marshal Pasquale Sabatello. Driver of the car was Thomas Farley, Chief Deputy Marshal. Beside him sat Chief Marshal William A. Carroll.

The car arrived at the prison at 2:30 p.m. and there Rosenberg was put through the admittance routine. The $2.08 in cash that he carried with him was impounded as contraband, he had no jewelry with him. He was asked the address of his next of kin, and gave it as that of his mother, Mrs. Sophie Rosenberg, New York City.

BROADWAY GAZETTE

BEAUTY DEPT.: Tyrone Power, wearing unusual dinner clothes—a dark pea jacket and a silk-ruffled dress-shirt—was a guest at the dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Ira Haupt. The handsome screen star was seated next to Harriet Ames, who stared in wonder at him. Then, without taking her eyes from Power, she shouted to her attorney: "Tie up my assets until this dream boy leaves town," and told the other guests: "My sense of values would be restored only if Mr. Power were to lose his hair."

VACATION DEPT.: As soon as Mary Martin ends her Broadway run in "South Pacific" on June 2, she and her husband, Richard Halliday, will board a rented 69-ft. yacht and head for the Atlantic. The yacht is one which has crossed the ocean several times. "And how long do you expect to stay aboard the boat?" the Hallidays were asked. "Until the morning when Mary wakes up," he replied, "and finally says 'My bones feel good.'"

SONG DEPT.: The Edio Pizzas took the Hallidays to the Stork Club yesterday, and Pizzas told Miss Martin about the Hollywood dinner where he always was asked to sing "Some Enchanted Evening." "I'd always sing something else," Pizzas told his former co-star. "People just can't understand that it is impossible for me to sing "Enchanted Evening" properly, unless I sing it to you." "I understand that," said Miss Martin. "It's like when they ask me to do 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy.' I can't do right by it unless I strip."

MUSIC DEPT.: Yma Sumac, the Peruvian sensation, made her Broadway debut this week in "Flahooey." Sumac has a voice range covering four octaves—perhaps even higher but only dogs could attest to that. "Sumac can hit notes so high," said actor Dan Tobin, "she should be allowed to sing only in air raids."

FASHION NOTE: The Boston Chamber of Commerce held its First Assembly of American Women of Achievement, and presented bejeweled medals to Sylvia F. Porter, Jacqueline Cochran, Eleanor Steber, Ethel Waters, Virginia C. Gilmore, and others. It was announced that Hattie Carnegie had been selected "because what Andrew Carnegie did for stock, Hattie did for silk." Before the meeting the Awards Committee met to decide on how the medals were to be pinned onto the recipients. Mrs. Harry J. Blake, wife of the Pres. of the Chamber of Commerce, was the last "winner."

Mrs. Blake reminded the committee that the ladies who were to receive the medals would all be wearing dinner gowns. "What would pin the medals on them?" Mrs. Blake asked the men. And one of the proper men asked: "And what'll we do when we come to Faye Emerson's medal?" A vote was taken, and the decision resulted in this procedure: As each lady was called up, the toastmaster handed her the medal and whispered: "Would you mind pinning it on yourself?"
POETRY DEPT: The late Nobel Prize winner, Andre Gide, was an agnostic. He sought religion with Paul Claudel, the playwright-novelist who was France's Ambassador to Japan and who is deeply religious... A French newspaper recently received a cablegram which allegedly came from Gide, who died last year. It read: "I am in Heaven—There is no Hell—Continue sinning—Note: Paul Claudel."

LOCAL NEWS: The Yugoslavs will call a World Peace Conference in Belgrade this summer, to weaken Europe's leftists away from Moscow... Orson Welles is making a series of recordings of original radio plays for American networks. He's making the recordings at Radio Lux... Carey McWilliams is rushing to N.Y. for an editorial post at The Nation... Gen. Eisenhower has changed his plans about coming back to preside over the American Assembly at Arden, N.Y. Lew Douglas will substitute for him there... Billy Rose, now 50 and in semi-retirement, is fulfilling another boyhood ambition. He's learning to drive a car.

PRESS DEPT: Julius Rosenberg, the doomed atom-bomb spy, was removed from the Federal House of Detention on Tuesday and sent to the death-house at Sing Sing, where his wife has been a prisoner since soon after they were sentenced. Rosenberg's removal to Sing Sing at this time was mentioned in my column—and is one of the 20 items whose sources the counsel for the spies demands to know... Judge John C. Knox, who was to decide whether the Court will direct me to answer, unfortunately is ill and was taken to a hospital yesterday.

In the meantime, at my request, Rep. Louis Holler has introduced a bill in Congress, to exempt newspapermen from having to reveal sources of information. This legislation would not apply to my case, for it is not retroactive... This is important legislation, to remedy a situation where newspapermen too frequently face a threat of a citation for contempt of court. No newspaperman, to my knowledge, ever has revealed a source even with a jail sentence as the alternative. We all do and will adhere to this tradition... If the Holler bill is passed, it would encourage the flow of information, broaden the accesses to truths and thereby help preserve and strengthen the freedom of our press.

CRIME DEPT: Larry Goddard worked for the Kefauver Committee, and his job was to receive the witnesses subpoenaed to private hearings, and bring them into the room where testimony was taken. Goddard therefore had an opportunity to meet Frank Costello, Joe Adonis and a host of other notorious figures in the underworld... Sen. Kefauver asked him what he thought of them. "The trouble with these racketeers, Senator," said the young man, "is that they're so congenial; so damn congenial."
Kin Not Visiting Spies in Prison

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, 35, convicted atom spy for Russia, has been in the death house six weeks, and her husband and doomed co-defendant, Julius, 33, has been there 10 days, but neither has been visited yet by relatives, Sing Sing officials disclosed yesterday. Prison observers assumed it was because the couple had notified their kin they wished no visitors.
The Forgotten:
The Rosenbergs

Special to World-Telegram and Sun.

SING SING, May 25.—Most occupants of the death house have friends or relatives to console them.

Not so Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, the condemned atom spies. Prison authorities say nobody has visited them.
ROSENBERGS GET LETTERS

Husband and Wife Write to Each Other in Sing Sing Prison

OSSINING, N. Y., May 26—Correspondence has been opened in Sing Sing between Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, 33 years old, and her husband, Julius Rosenberg, 32, Federal prisoners in the death house. Their letters are closely scrutinized by either Charles Glazier, official chief censor, or one of his assistants. The letters, after being censored, are sealed in envelopes and delivered, along with any censored mail from outside the walls.

Warden Wilfred Denno has permitted each to write a letter a day, but neither Mrs. Rosenberg nor her husband writes that frequently. They are unable to see or talk to one another, as they are kept in separate corridors of the death house. Neither has asked a visit from the other, although Warden Denno has indicated such a meeting might be permitted, occasionally, under close supervision. It is seventy-eight years since both husband and wife were in prison and carried on an intramural correspondence. They were Ned and Sophie Lyons, swindlers.
A-Bomb Spies Swap Letters

Atom bomb spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg write letters to one another from separate wings in the Sing Sing Prison death house, State attaches said yesterday.

The letters go through the prison's censorship channels. Warden Wilfred Denno has authorized the two to write one letter a day to each other.

The Rosenbergs were sentenced to death for stealing American atom-bomb secrets for a Soviet spy ring.

THE LADY DEPARTS: Barbara Hutton will sail for Europe on Wednesday, her physicians had cautioned her that if she were to return to Mexico, as she had planned, it might impair her health. Her proposal to spend the summer in the West, with her son, was frowned upon with a warning that her frail condition cannot withstand the 8,500-ft. altitude. Miss Hutton therefore decided to go to Paris. "A new Spring dress and a Paris hat," she said, "are a tonic for any woman's morale." She'll spend part of the summer at her home in Tangiers, the only house she owns.

Her return to Paris will stir Prince Igor Troubetzkoy's hopes, of course, but in vain. Miss Hutton is determined against any reconciliation and resolute about giving him no money. Troubetzkoy is a citizen of France and under French law, if Miss Hutton were to move to an apartment in Paris, he would have the right to break in and live there too. But Troubetzkoy's dream of the Hutton millions and of a reconciliation will be shattered—for she will stay in a hotel, The Ritz, where her relatives, the Donohues, live, and outside her door, on 24-hour guard duty, will be stalwart American bodyguards.

THE PEOPLE WHO REMEMBERED: Nick Kelly, one of the overseers at the Copacabana, left the employ of the nightclub last week. He'd been there ever since it opened. He left because of a dispute with the management over the proper scaling of Faye Emerson and Skitch Henderson... Before he came to New York, Kelly worked in the casinos of Nevada. There he met a nightclub dancer, Mayris Chaney. "If you ever get to New York," he told her, "look me up and I'll buy you a dinner." Miss Chaney remembered, looked him up, and accepted his invitation to dinner—and brought a friend, Eleanor Roosevelt.

It was a pleasant dinner, and when it was over Mrs. Roosevelt said the customary: "If there's anything I can do for you..." Kelly remembered two people who had befriended him in Nevada, Messrs. Graham and McKay, who were in the Federal Penitentiary—and boldly suggested that there was something Mrs. Roosevelt might do. She might help spring them, he said... Mrs. Roosevelt said she'd check into it—and the too remembered. She reported that a check on the case of the Nevada gamblers indicated that the wheels of justice had moved properly in their case, and that any interference would be unwarranted.

THE AIRING COMIC: Jackie Gleason is staying at Doctor Hospital, between appearances on his "Cavalcade of Stars" program. Fred Allen visited him there last week, and when a nurse carrying a hypodermic approached Gleason he turned to Allen and asked: "Would you like to join me in a shot?"... Gleason then was given a check for the luncheon and signed it. "Just like in a nightclub," said Allen. "Tell me, can you bring a girl up here too?"... "Of course," replied Gleason, "but only if she has a fever."
CHATTER: A memoir on Jan Masaryk, published privately by Sir Bruce Lockhart, reveals the plans Masaryk had made to escape from Red Prague—on the day he met his death... The next political headlines will come out of the State Liquor Authority... Winston Churchill received from Margaret Truman a first-hand report on his daughter Sarah's appearance on Broadway in "Gramercy Ghost"... For the first time since the outbreak of the war, there be a revival of the traditional N.Y. L.H. & H.R.R. observation train and the dinner dance at the Griswold, following the Harvard-Yale Regatta June 22... The New Leader just was served with a $200,000 libel suit by The Nation and Alvarez del Vayo.

THE PRACTICAL JOKE: Alfred Hitchcock, who frequently indulges in complicated practical jokes, spoke yesterday of the finest and least expensive practical joke he'd ever heard of. He chose this one because of its simplicity and because it involved a psychological touch which played on pride, bewilderment and near-panic. The victim was a distinguished electrical engineer, one of the nation's foremost experts on mechanics. He worked at a large desk and he never left it until the problems of the day had been solved and all the papers cleared, leaving it shiny and bare.

On the ceiling directly above the desk was a large electric fan. One morning, when the engineer came to his office, he found a tiny screw on the desk. He inspected the fan, watched it operate, and could detect nothing wrong... The next day he found on his desk a tiny spring, on which there was a smear of oil. He was perplexed, operated the fan and still could detect nothing wrong. He inspected the fan closely, took it apart, put it together again, but couldn't find the place from which the screw and the spring had come... When he arrived at his office the third morning, he found his desk shiny and bare—but all four walls had been sprayed, as if in one whirring motion, with "escaping" oil.

THE VISIT: The mother of David Greenglass and Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, the atom-bomb spies, is anxious to visit her daughter in the death-house at Sing Sing. The tragic woman is eager to talk to her daughter, in the hope she could persuade her to do as her brother did, and disclose the full story of the espionage. So far her efforts to see Mrs. Rosenberg and her son-in-law, Julius Rosenberg, have been fruitless, for their attorney said they do not wish to see her. Mrs. Greenglass, therefore, will make a direct appeal, to cut through other intermediaries and ask permission of the Director of Prisons.

"Mrs. Greenglass' first inkling of their political fervor came in 1940, during the Soviet-Nazi pact, when her son, David, tried to take down the picture of President Roosevelt which the mother kept in her apartment. She protested and asked David why. "Julius," her son told her, "says he's bad."
Apathy Flourishes In Washington
By Doris Fleeson

Washington, June 7—The next few weeks will show whether the Truman Administration has the will to fight for its policies.

The Senate calendar is bare. Senators who have been checking the legislative prospects, in the hope of making vacation plans, hear that a minimum of action is contemplated. Appropriations—regular and special—extension of the defense act, and very little else are being discussed.

Most committees are rocking along desultorily, meeting seldom and making no effort to produce major legislation. On those that are active—Appropriations, Banking and Currency, and the combined Foreign Relations-Armed Services group—hostile Republicans keep taking the initiative. Judiciary, under Chairman McCarran, is practically on a sitdown strike and no real attempt is being made to break it. President Truman’s scheme of cozy little conferences with groups of Democrats has not been very productive of either action or understanding.

MRS. ROSENBERG

He has not affected the legislative torpor and his callers have had little apparent influence on his thinking about retention of Secretary of State Acheson, Donald Dawson and others.

Many members of Congress are also bitterly dissatisfied with the functioning—or lack of it—of the National Committee. So far they have not dented the complacency of Chairman Boyle nor persuaded the President that the committee needs a shake-up badly. Nor are they getting the help from the committee that they want.

The capital story is that the politics-for-profit boys control the committee, choose its staff and absorb its energy. No interest is taken, it is charged, in the business of reelecting those Democrats actually on the firing line. There is a grapevine report that the President will soon find out by way of some actions that these gripes are real and deeply felt.

To some degree the same lack of liaison prevails between the departments and the Hill. Each charges the other with apathy and both can prove it.

Senators complain that the executive branch does not use its weapons to follow through when avenues to help the Administration are opened to them. The Justice Dept. under Attorney General McGrath is a particular target of this complaint. Senate Armed Services, for example, worked long and hard for the eventual triumphant vindication of Assistant Secretary of Defense Rosenberg; the record of its hearings, which apparently showed rank perjury, went to the Justice Dept. and obscurity.

In their preoccupation with the past, its controversies and its errors, in their insistence upon proving that Mr. Roosevelt was wrong and they were right, Republicans are failing to call attention to these aspects of what is wrong with the present. It is still a fertile field.
Shift to Death Cell of Atom Spy Upheld

Court Turns Down Appeal of Ethel Rosenberg

Judge Henry W. Goddard ruled yesterday in United States District Court that the transfer of Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, convicted atom spy, to Sing Sing Prison was lawful and that her confinement in the death cell block was "not unusual or cruel and inhuman within the meaning of the Eighth Amendment of the United States Constitution."

Mrs. Rosenberg had obtained a writ of habeas corpus when she charged the government had ordered her from the women's house of detention to Sing Sing's death house to subject her to "cruel and inhuman punishment" and to "break her" into confessing a crime about which she maintains her innocence, although she has been convicted. She and her husband, Julius, were convicted April 5 of conspiracy to transmit military secrets to Russia, and were sentenced to death. Their executions were stayed pending appeals. A third defendant, Morton Sobell, was given thirty years in prison.

Judge Goddard ruled that the Attorney General has the authority to transfer prisoners from a Federal prison to a state prison. The court also ruled that the defense did not produce any convincing evidence that Mrs. Rosenberg was removed to the death cell in an effort to break her.

Judge Goddard said that Mrs. Rosenberg's transfer was not instigated by Federal authorities but by city authorities, who operate the Women's House of Detention. He said evidence at the hearing was that the House of Detention was overcrowded and there were no facilities there to take care of a woman awaiting the death penalty.

The court found that Mrs. Rosenberg is getting the same treatment as a state prisoner who might be awaiting execution. He added that the Legislature and the court of New York have determined that confinement in the death cell does not inflict cruel punishment.
Mrs. Rosenberg Must Stay in Death House

Mrs. Ethel Rosenberg, sentenced to death as an atom spy, will have to stay in her Sing Sing death cell until her appeal is decided.

Her attempt to be shifted back to the Women's House of Detention failed yesterday with Judge Henry W. Goddard's ruling federal authorities did not act improperly in transferring her to the state prison.

He held her counsel had not submitted any convincing evidence to bear out her contention she was shifted to the death cell block in an effort to "break" her into confession.

Broadway Ballad

Last night, between the midnight and the dawn,
I walked the quiet avenues of sleep.
And everywhere I looked—her blinds were drawn
Against the passer-by who went to keep
A rendezvous with memory...but you,
Like other people, were in number cursed,
And in my hour of heartbreak never knew
That I was lonely somewhere in the world.

Why must we recollection be so keen
So poignant, and why must I be the kind
Who mourns a falling petal, while serene,
And placid are the waters of your mind?

The law of compensation must be such
That some should dream too little—some too much.

Doomed Spies Granted Time To File Appeal

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 2 (INS).—Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, under sentence of death as Atom spies, won a two-months' extension today to prepare an appeal from their sentence.

The extension, to Oct. 15, was granted the Rosenbergs' attorney, Emanuel H. Bloch of New York, by U. S. Circuit Court Judge Clark in New Haven.

Bloch disclosed that the Rosenbergs were visited yesterday in their death cells at Sing Sing by their two sons, 8 and 4 years old. It was the first time the Rosenbergs had seen their children in a year, Bloch said.

Rosenberg, 32, and his 35-year-old wife, were sentenced to death in New York on April 5 by Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman for transmitting U. S. atom secrets to Russia during and after World War II.

Judge Clark also granted a two-months' extension to counsel for Milton Sobell, 34, under sentence of 50 years for betraying nonatomic military secrets.
Atom Spies' 2 Sons—Visit Death House

By the Associated Press.

OSSINING, N.Y., Aug. 8.—Two small boys looked about uneasily as they were led through a corridor of Sing Sing Prison’s death house. An iron door clanged shut behind them.

There, in a bare concrete room with bars on the windows, the two boys met their parents, Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, condemned to die as atom spies for Russia.

The meeting Wednesday was the first in a year between the parents and their sons, Robert, 4, and Michael, 4.

One at a time, the parents were brought in for short visits—first the mother, then the father. Each parent brought small gifts for their sons—candy bars and a bag of hard candy bought at the prison canteen.

A guard, a matron and the condemned couple's attorney, Emanuel Bloch, were present.

Parents and sons embraced fervently. Shy at first in the strange surroundings, the children—soon were chatting about family and school. They have been staying with their paternal grandfather. There were no tears. The children were smiling happily when they left.

Rosenbergs See Their Children In Death House

A quietly dramatic reunion took place Wednesday in the big, bare counsel room of the death house at Sing Sing prison between a father and mother under sentence to the electric chair and their two young sons whom they had not seen in a year.

The parents are Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted last spring of espionage conspiracy. Yesterday their attorney, Emanuel H. Bloch, obtained from U. S. Court of Appeals Judge Clark in New Haven an extension from Aug. 15 to Oct. 15 for filing the record and brief in their appeal.

At the Sing Sing reunion, the 8 and 4 year-old boys spent an hour with each parent in separate meetings. Present with the mother were a sergeant of guards, a matron and Bloch. The sergeant and Bloch witnessed the meeting of father and sons.

There was some shyness at the start—the children had not seen their parents since the father’s arrest in July, 1950 and the mother’s in August. But they warmed up under parental embraces and homespun conversation about family school and camp. Together, mother and children and, later, father and children sang folk songs they had learned and sung in common when they had a home together. The children now are living with their paternal grandmother.

Also helping to resolve the first shyness were modest gifts brought to the meetings by the parents—a couple of candy bars and a bag of hard candy purchased at the prison canteen.

The older child revealed some knowledge of his parents’ plight and concern for their future. The parents were reassuring. Throughout the brief visits, they maintained an atmosphere of jollity, good humor and song.

The children left the prison happy. There had been no tears in their presence. These came afterwards.

Spy Ethel Rosenberg Laughs as She Waits Death as a Traitor

By HOWARD RUSHMORE

"She was a full fledged partner in this crime—a crime worse than murder."—Judge B. Kaufman.

In the tiny yard surrounded by the grim gray walls of Sing Sing, a plump, dark-haired woman scampers after the hand ball and her high-pitched laughter taunts her older and perspiring partner in the game.

A few feet from the hand-ball court is a somber room with a single object dominating the scene—a plain, wooden chair in which American justice has decreed that Ethel Rosenberg will pay for "a crime worse than murder."

But the first woman ever to be sentenced to the supreme penalty for espionage seems oblivious to the lurking shadow of that wired chair a few feet from her cell block and her exercise court.

The four matrons assigned by Warden Wilfred Dembo to guard the 35-year-old prisoner 24 hours a day are amazed by her cheerfulness, her brazen unconcern for the fate that awaits her and her husband, Julius, 32.

STOLE A-BOMB SECRETS

Both were sentenced to death by Judge Kaufman last April 5th after a jury had found them both guilty of stealing atom bomb secrets for their Soviet superior in a well-organized Kremlin espionage network of which Julius was the American commissar.

Five days later, the squab, olive-skinned Ethel was hustled out of the Women's House of Detention to her death chamber City prison officials had demanded her removal.

Their fears were based on the revulsion felt by the other inmates against the Rosenberg woman—e'en in the criminal world, treason can provoke the wrath of convicts ready to nurse out their own system of justice for spies.

Since she has been in the woman's wing of Sing Sing, Ethel Rosenberg has had two dubious distinctions:

She is the most expensive prisoner in the Ossining Institution's history;

She is the most uncorrupted person to occupy the five-by-nine cells which stand so close to eternity.

Journal America

Aug. 3, 1951
KEY COSTS $3.50 A DAY.

Sing Sing is paying in her own grim role of host, for as a Federal prisoner, the United States Government is billed for her upkeep, food and guards. That bill costs the American taxpayer $3.50 per day.

To date, Ethel Rosenberg's has cost Uncle Sam more than $4,000. Her appeal and that of her husband will not be argued until October and estimating the usual delays, for an opinion and a Supreme Court ruling that bill will climb to more than $16,000 by the end of the year.

Perhaps the thought she is leading the America she hated $270.20 a week keeps Ethel Rosenberg in her happy frame of mind.

That and the psychological reaction of the hardened Communist spy that martyrdom is the end of the rainbow for the Red faithful.

ONLY WOMAN IN DEATH CELL.

She is the only occupant of the death house's women's wing and a matron, neatly dressed in white uniform, sits at a desk directly in front of Ethel's small but well-lighted cell.

A native player—the espionage agent once studied guitar and is a music lover—and there are magazines to read at request.

If she wants a shower, she is escorted to the last cell, where facilities are provided for bathing.

Hand ball, weather permitting, is part of her regular schedule and her partner is the matron assigned to that particular shift. Ethel is reported to be an avid player and gives her older partner a tussle.

Bad weather sometimes keeps her out of the exercise yard adjoining the women's wing but during sunny afternoons Ethel is reported to spend as much as three hours playing hand ball in the 50 by 50 foot enclosure.

VISITS HUSBAND WEEKLY.

The spy is permitted to visit her slender, sardonic husband once a week and chat briefly with him across a table with two guards on hand.

That is the only time Ethel and Julius see each other. He is lodged with seven other doomed criminals in the men's wing.

They write each other daily after Sunset granted them permission with the understanding that all such letters would be censored.

One of the few times that Ethel Rosenberg has displayed emotion was early this month when their children, Robert, and Michael, visited them at the prison.

Judge Kaufman said at the sentencing: "You put the cause of espionage above that of your children."

Ethel and Julius brought their candy and other presents.
But Martha Beck, an "Ir commit" a crime worse than murder."

And she showed a human reaction to the shadow of the chair.

HARDENED COMMUNIST.

Ethel Rosenberg is a new type for these matrons. They have never guarded a hardened Communist, never watched the hourly reactions of a woman who plotted and worked to destroy her country and millions of its citizens.

In his denunciation of her,
Judge Kaufman said:

"Instead of deterring him
(Julius) from pursuing his ignnoble cause, she encouraged and assisted the cause. She was a mature woman—almost three years older than her husband and almost seven years older than her younger brother."

It was chubby David Greenglass, a U. S. Army sergeant at Los Alamos that became the foil for his sister Ethel and his brother-in-law Julius. They persuaded Greenglass to supply them with atom bomb secrets and paid him amounts ranging from $500 to $5,000.

Greenglass said they had told him the information "was going to the Russians" and that the money was obtained from the Soviet spy heads.

For this crime, Ethel Rosenberg awaits the electric chair.

The accountants have estimated the estate tax on the William Randolph Hearst properties; between 65 and 70 million, with ten years in which to raise it... When the State Dept. men at the San Francisco Conference were asked about the absence of Gen. MacArthur they revealed that the invitation to him from John Foster Dulles had been suggested by the President, upon the urging of Gen. George C. Marshall... Henry Ford II learned that the new Republic of Israel was in desperate need of rock-crushers, for use in getting material for house-building. Ford then donated a complete rock-crushing plant.

Ludwig Bemelmans attended the famous costume gala in Venice wearing the costume of a waiter. Bemelmans, who once was a waiter at the Ritz, had no invitation to the gala and arranged to attend as a real waiter. He took notes for a magazine story about it... The sponsors of last night's "Toast of the Town" telecast, a dramatization of the career of Oscar Hammerstein II, paid Carole Bruce in full, although she didn't appear. Miss Bruce was standing by in the event that trouble arose over the appearance of Lena Horne. Henry Droug, of the Theater Authority, threatened to yank the show if Miss Horne were stopped from appearing... U. S. Atty. Saypol, designated for a court post, will resign before the campaign begins.

Jake LaMotta, the ex-middleweight champ, thinks Randy Turpin will beat Ray Robinson on Wednesday. "I saw Turpin reading comic books, while Robinson has a doctor with him," LaMotta reasoned. "It means Robinson's nervous about it and Turpin ain't!... Adam Di Gattano, of the dancing DiGattanos, was stung during a performance in Kansas City and now is in an oxygen tent at Misericordia Hospital there... Of the 49 women invited by Gen. Marshall to join his committee to help recruit, 46 responded favorably. Of the remaining three, two are ill and the third, Irene Dunne, is in Europe and couldn't be reached in time.

John Osborne, editor of Life's editorial page, is moving to Washington for the Luce publications. He will be replaced here by the man he succeeded, Jack Jessup... Sylvia Sidney will tour the country in Clifford Odets' hit of last season, "Country Girl," as soon as the producers find a leading man to meet her approval... Gen. Tony Biddle, now in Paris as a member of SHAPE staff, serves as Gen. Eisenhower's official Military Diplomat. Mary Lawrence, wife of Col. Jack Lawrence, heard Gen. Biddle ask: "What kind of uniform should I wear as Military Diplomat?" She suggested: "A green official blouse, and striped trousers."

King Farouk of Egypt was at the gambling casinos in Cannes last week, contrary to the reports that he had stopped his spree. At the high-stake chemin-de-fer table the King of Egypt was asked by one of the players what he thought would happen to the world in the next few years... "I believe that soon there will be only five Kings left in the whole world," replied Farouk. "The King of Hearts, the King of Spades, the King of Clubs, the King of Diamonds—and, maybe, the King of England."

Buddy Hackett, the comic, insists that when he sought the help of a psychoanalyst to cure him of his inferiority complex, the psychoanalyst told him: "You have no complex; you really ARE inferior." Grace Hayes, owner of the Red Rooster nightclub in Las Vegas—the only club in town where there's no gambling—faces condemnation of her property, which is needed to effect a widening of the street. She's dissatisfied with the conditions that are set on the doorstep who try to take her place away the atom-bomb spy who has his base planted right in front.

Spies Allowed Sing Sing Visit

Atomic spies Julius Rosenberg, 35, and his wife, Ethel, 35, are now allowed to see each other for one hour a week, it was revealed yesterday as she started her sixth month in the Sing Sing death house and he neared the end of his fourth. A keeper escorts Rosenberg from the male section to the corridor outside his wife's cell in the women's section, and watches and listens—as does a metronome—while husband and wife, separated by double screens, converse together. They can't touch each other.

The couple, convicted of wartime spying for Russia as part of the Klaus Fuchs-Harry Gold apparatus, are appealing their death sentences.
